

New mesh company enters screen printing arena

Daniele De Rosa, former Chairman of ESMA, has founded Extris, a new company which aims to supply meshes for everyday print jobs at reasonable costs. Extris offers a range of polyester monofilament fabrics to stretchers and printers through a small network of independent partners. The company has designed a 'no frill fabric' which meets a defined list of basic performance criteria such as elongation, stability, relaxation and geometry regularity. ■